I give the manuscript a score of 7.

The manuscript appears to be well-written and deals with an important topic, not only for Nigeria but for the entire world.

I have two concerns that I hope the author can address in a revision to the piece.

1) The author implies that his/her findings are causal. Correlational research does not imply causation. I think it is important that the author states this in the limitation section of the paper. Perhaps there are other underlying causes for both the antisocial behavior and for marital conflict etc.

2) The author suggests very briefly some topics for the interventions. I would like to see a greater depth of discussion in terms of interventions that might help these young people. Readers would want to know more specifics about such interventions so that they may be able to test them out in future research.

If the author can address these two concerns I would be able to recommend the paper for publication.

Editor’s Details:
Timothy Rasinski
Kent State University, USA

Note: Modification was done in this document ONLY to hide the email id.